I won't bother to give a synopsis of the storyline, which has been very well covered by fellow reviewers. Nigella is, indeed, my own goddess of the kitchen and I'm happily collecting the rest of her books. Then, as if Patrick O'Brian had taken far too much of Stephen Maturin's beloved laudanum, Wyckham, his crew and accompanying squadron are plummeted onto an alien planet in parallel universe populated by creatures right out of Star Wars: the Draesh, cyclopean monsters who devour British sailors with the same relish as Polyphemus ate Odysseus' men, and their ferocious crab-like warrior slaves, the Krag. Lord Edward Benedict Frederick, 13th Lord of Dixon, is her mentor and guide on this journey of sensual realization.
